FOREMOST NEWSPAPER OF THE during the last ten years, this will be found one of the most fascinating and impressive. Wherever the English language is spoken the works of J. F. Smith are familiar to every class. His "Lady Ashleigh," "Bank-er's Secret," "Our Howard," "Woman and her Master," "Stanfield Hisli," "Minnio Gray," "Amy Lawrence," "Sir Bernard Gaston," etc., etc., take rank with the productions of any living novelist, and have been republished in this country with immense success. In

DEEP TRAGIC INTEREST "Edith Aveland, or All in the Wrong," surpasses them all, and will add largely to the American popularity of its grited author, noon whose men-tal shoulders the mantle of the "Wizard of the North" seems to have

TRANSLATED BY FRANCIS JORDAN.

ONE VOLUME, &re., ILLUSTRATED. PAPER COVERS, OF SOL CLOTH, $2.

" In this novel the author unrolls before us the great rising of the Germans against Napoleon, and depicts with masterly skill the most stirring wents and episodes of the great year 1813. Old Gen. Blücher, that impetuous youth of seventy, around whom the noblest spirits of the father and railied with so much enthusiasm and devotion, and on whom princh and soldiers, with one accord, conferred the immortal title of 'Marshal Forward, is the leading hero of the work. The author comm s shout this remarkable man many facts not to be found in the histories girl who fought under Lützew, and many other prominent characters of the times, are grouped around Blücher with that dramatic power for which Louisa Mühlbach is noted.

" In the last chapters of the work the author takes us to France, and depicts in the most thrilling manner the momentum events that led to Napoleon's first abdication. The Emperor, Josephine, Maria Louisa, the King of Rome, of whom the author presents a portrait of surpassing beauty; the leading marshals and statesmen of the first empire; the princes and generals of the affied armies, flushed with victors-all pass inder our eyes in a number of episodes drawn with so much skill that, op aying down the volume, we must admit that we have not only read history, but have, as it were, seen and heard the leading actors of one ef the most important and interesting periods."
